

Moving to Europe? Look no further

Few things in life are as stressful as moving home and it's no wonder those pressures can intensify when it involves moving to another country. There's the safety of your personal and cherished belongings to consider as they're being packed, loaded, transported and delivered. And then there's storage!

Moving to Europe is no more complicated than moving within the UK - it's just that the distances tend to be a bit longer, and there is always at least some water to cross!

With the development and expansion of the European Union, the movement of vehicles and goods is a great deal easier than it was in former times, but it still requires experience and familiarity with the processes to comply with all the customs and entry requirements of the different countries - not all of which are EU member states.

Many BAR members have wide experience in relocating families to the Continent, and some have become specialists in running regular trips to certain destinations - ask your remover about their own particular expertise.

Your chosen remover should be able to advise you about documentation and entry requirements regarding your goods and they will also be able to advise you of the kinds of unexpected factors which could affect the move.

If you're planning on using a removals company, be sure to approach one you can trust.

Code of Practice

Members agree to comply with the BAR Code of Practice. This covers how the company operates, how they work with customers, other BAR members and BAR itself.

Insurance

All member companies must have insurance which meets BAR standards.

Professional Training

BAR has its very own training division, which trains over 2000 people every year. All BAR companies have access to courses which help to ensure that staff are fully aware of the latest materials, techniques and procedures to make your move go smoothly.

Consumer Affairs

BAR is there to support you should you have a problem. Whilst we have total confidence in our members, BAR operates a free conciliation service to sort out disputes in a friendly way. This is backed up with a low cost independent arbitration scheme to help if you cannot reach agreement.
